

The harvest is plenty, laborers are few...

There is so much work to do...the poor keep coming. The need keeps growing. At times the work can seem impossibly too big to undertake. At moments like these, the Holy Spirit reaches out to men and women of faith and asks us to take up our cross and join our brothers and sisters in the mission fields. We need not go far to reach our personal mission field; perhaps it is your family. Perhaps it is your workplace, neighborhood, or church. In every corner of our community there are men, women and children who are calling out to God's mercy. The poor are not only those who lack the material means of survival; the poor include the lonely, the infirm, the lost, and the searching.

Are you searching? Do you feel God's call to reach out to the least of our brothers? Has the Holy Spirit touched your heart and given you a desire to play an active part in the evangelization of our world? You are not alone! Many have received the very same call.

As you discern your place in God's plan, consider that you may be called to the ordained or consecrated life. Men, the church needs priests now more than ever, good men to guide us and bring us Christ. Women, the world needs your compassionate, active love, and the consecrated life may be your calling.

At St. Luke's we always welcome those who are interested in finding out more about the missionary life. Come to the Mission, lend a hand, and experience the lives we have been called to. Join the missionary community in prayer, and experience the power of adoration and the liturgy as we pray for our community and one another. Listen to the quiet voice of God in your heart and discern where He would have you serve.

St. Luke's does not turn away anyone interested in learning about the work we do or the life we live. We are people like you, with our own joys and brokenness, but our lives are marked with the reality of God's greatest attribute: His Mercy. Call St. Luke's today and discern God's will for your life.
